RICHARD T. MYERS

For twenty years an active member of Borough Council, Richard T. Myers, of 145 Otter street, is the Republican nominee for re-election to represent the Third Ward. A native of Bristol, Mr. Myers has lived here all his life except four years spent in the West.

He was born on Beaver Dam road December 2, 1876, son of the late John B. and Annie Trudgen Myers, and was educated in the Bristol public schools. He worked in the West as a locomotive machinist. On his return here, he worked for the Baltimore and Ohio and the Pennsylvania railroads.

In 1901 Mr. Myers engaged in the grocery business here, which he continued for ten years. He then established his automobile business at his present address.

A number of years ago Mr. Myers served as school director, and twenty years ago was elected to Borough Council. As chairman of the Police Committee, he was a leader in the successful drive to make congested thoroughfares in the Mill street district one-way streets. So active was he in this that he was nicknamed "One-way" Myers, a take-off on the then popular "Wroig-way" Corrigan. He also served for a time as chairman of the Streets and Highways Committee.

At present he is chairman of the Health and Sanitation Committee, chairman of the new Zoning Committee, and is member of the Fire Protection and the Public Works Committees. He also is a member of Bristol Fire Co., No. 3.

On October 17, 1900, Mr. Myers married Meta Worthington. They have two sons, Richard T. Myers, Jr., and Lewis M. Myers, and two daughters, Mrs. Ernest Lawrence, Jr., of Crestmont Farms, Torrence, and Mrs. Leonard Bassett, of Bristol.

A SUMMARY OF THE NEWS

Administration spokesmen in Washington took issue with Senator Taft's suggestion to limit Marshall plan aid to Europe to $4,500,000,000 annually.

Voluntary food saving is so rapidly attaining its goal of 100,000,000 extra bushels of grain for export that meatless Tuesdays, poultryless Thursdays and other measures may be discontinued by the first of the year, Chairman Luckman of the Citizens Food Committee said.

General Clay disclosed that he had asked to be retired from the Army some time in 1948, but expected to remain as Military Governor of Germany until that time.

All non-Communist parties in the French National Assembly rallied behind Premier Ramadier in a bitter debate with Communist Leader Duclos over the Marshall plan and relations with the United States.

Winston Churchill assailed the British Labor Government, called for new elections and praised American free enterprise. Guglielmo Giannini resigned as chief of the Common Man Front in Italy, and Polish Peasant party Leftists formed a temporary executive committee, convened a party congress and dismissed followers of Stanislaw Mikolajczyk.

PLAY IT SAFE: VOTE!

There's just one sensible way for every citizen to look at the question of how to cast his vote, and whether to cast it at all. That is disregard all guesses about the outcome of the election (including his own) and to cast his ballot as though the fate of the entire election hinged on his single vote.

Voting is the most sacred duty of a citizen. The stay-at-home vote is a disgrace to the concept of "popular sovereignty" upon which the American system is founded.

Think of it: every man and woman is part ruler of the entire American structure of government—national, state, county and local—and yet in the past thousands haven't been interested enough to go to the polls on election day!

No wonder the American system has run into serious trouble at the various levels of government!

Don't shirk your duty on election day. There is no good excuse for an able-bodied citizen, who is registered and not compelled to be away from home, failing to get to the polls. The term "slacker" is usually used of those who refuse to help their country's war effort—but it fits quite as well those who are too indifferent to the problems of peace to meet their obligations of casting their ballots.

Problems of the most colossal consequence to all the American people are going to have to be worked out during the coming months. Every vote at every election will have some bearing on these problems.

So make your plans now for next Tuesday. Don't take the outcome for granted. Don't be tempted to feel that "it doesn't make much difference anyway."

BE SURE TO VOTE!

And remember, you can cast your vote for all state, county and local Republican nominees by making a single crossmark on your ballot. Simply look for the word Republican where it appears in heavy type, and put an "X" after it, thus:

REPUBLICAN X

"COMINGFORM"

Paris formerly was the style center of the world. How conscientiously milady still follows its dictates cannot be determined with accuracy, but undoubtedly its influence is still extensive.
Now Gay Paree has made a contribution to another style, a style which gained widespread attention throughout the world, although Americans seem to be its foremost adherents.

This reference is to the American penchant for abbreviation and contraction, and the application of code names. It started with the AAA and the CCC and all the other alphabet agencies. Headline writers seized on FDR, CIO, AFL, GOP. Then the cabinet circle began referring to the erstwhile Secretary of the Treasury as Henry the Morgue.

The French, ever alert to the international pulse, have come up with a new one. It's "Comin-form," used to describe the new Communist information bureau, as it's called, recently ordered established in Yugoslavia by Moscow. It's a pretty good term, and there's only one trouble with it:
No matter how it's spelled or abbreviated or contracted, it's still Comintern—and it isn't any sweeter under any other name.

FARM YOUTH BEHAVIOR

Are farm boys and girls better disciplined than those who live in the city? There are those who say they are.

Boys and girls who belong to 4-H clubs probably have more opportunity to learn the meaning of getting along as a group and working in cooperation than city children.

They meet the year around in club work, they go places in groups. They live together and give and take.

If these children ever get into trouble, it is so minor nobody ever hears about it. Their behavior is so good it always draws comment from the crowds attending the shows in which they participate.

Perhaps city children would be as well behaved if they had the training 4-H children get. Outside of a comparatively small number who go to summer camps, engage in club work or possibly make an athletic team, few city children have a chance to engage in cooperative living with their fellows. Too often the corner gang takes the place of the 4-H club for city boys and girls.

TO THE PUBLIC:
As a means of expediting traffic with greater safety to the travelling public; protecting those expected here tomorrow evening to participate in as well as view the Halloween parade, certain rules governing the use of the public highways and streets, within the borough, have been promulgated. We ask the full co-operation of the public, and especially the residents of Bristol, to make these rules and regulations 100% effective.

Parking will not be permitted on East Circle, Cleveland street, or Hayes street from six o'clock p. m. until after the parade has left the
area.

Parking will not be permitted on Farragut avenue, Pond street to Walnut; Walnut from Pond to Beaver, Buckley, Bath, Mill, and Radcliffe street to Dorrance street, until after the parade has left the
area.

Free parking facilities will be found on the borough's free parking lot in the rear of Mill street where a very large number of cars can be accommodated.

Bristol police will be augmented by a detail of Pennsylvania State Police, and Bristol's special police, who will be posted at strategic points to guide traffic, protect the public, and to aid in every possible way to make the occasion a happy and pleasant one for the visitors as well as those of our permanent population.

Other guests were: Betty-Jane Hall, Polly Anne and Edward Chamberlain, Anne Fristoe, Gary Rettew, Harry Gordon, "Jack" George, "Rudy" Scheffey and "Bobby" Harrison. believer that he could escape his past. Almost shyly, the sheriff walked up to the unsuspecting fugitive and said, "How are you, Bob?"

Ahlm then said, "I've something to read to you." When he started to read a fugitive warrant, Collins interrupted with, "I know what it's about. Sheriff, I'll go along."

When State Trooper Kenneth Stump, who had accompanied Ahlm as a matter of routine, extended handcuffs, Collins held forth his hands and remarked to his friend, "This is a terrible thing—my wife and my boys are going to miss me a lot. She doesn't know a thing about this—it's going to be terrible."

Only a short while before, at his headquarters here, Ahlm had received a letter from Mobile, Ala., signed by W. L. Odiorne, identification officer for Mobile county. It stated that a James Robert Collins was wanted as a prisoner who had escaped while serving a life term for murder. Inclosed were a warrant, a set of fingerprints and a photograph.

Ahlm glanced at the picture, then exclaimed, "Good Lord, that's Bob Collins, my neighbor!" Deputy Sheriff August Wackerman, who also knew Collins well, heard his chief, looked at the photo and said, "Yep, that must be him."

Both law officers were astounded, and agreed that they would not believe the fugitive warrant until they had confronted Collins with it.

At the county prison where Collins immediately agreed to waive extradition, he said he had been writing to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Collins, in Mobile, since shortly after his escape, and believed that the interception of one of his letters by postal authorities finally led to his apprehension.

Collins' wife, the former Agnes Kline, was brought to his cell and nearly fainted when, as he said, "I told her for the first time I was a convict."

His wife stood by him and said she would go to Mobile with their children, aged 4 and 9, to be by his side when he is arraigned as a fugitive from justice.

Collins, a slender, pleasant-faced man about five feet, five inches tall, told Sheriff Ahlm this story of his past.

In the summer of 1928, while still a high school student in Mobile, he was approached by three men who offered him "a small sum" if he would "stand guard as a lookout for them." He did so, while the men held up the Bank of Citronelle, 20 miles from Mobile.

In the holdup, the teller was killed. One of the other bandits also was killed—by a bullet fired by one of his confederates. Collins, who was armed but took no part in the gun-play, fled but was found that night hiding in woods near the bank. Collins was convicted of first-degree murder, Nov. 8, 1928, and sent to Speigner Prison in Mobile county, for life. He first escaped five years later, but was caught and put on a bread and water diet for 30 days. He became a model prisoner and was made a trusty.

On Jan. 10, 1936, he disappeared while driving a stone-hauling truck on a prisoners highway project. He went to Philadelphia, worked several weeks in a restaurant there, then worked two years on the turkey farm near here before going to work for the Quakertown contractor "and starting in earnest to build my new life."

Soon after arriving in Quakertown, he married Miss Kline and began taking an active interest in community affairs.

Although he never tried to change his name to avoid detection, Collins said that "never a day or night passed that I wasn't afraid of being arrested." He added, almost with a chuckle, that at one time he sold poultry to State Police who used to ride past the turkey farm "and I always thought that 'one of them' would suddenly say, 'You're under arrest.'" its program, the more beauty one sees. Sometimes a member feels dissatisfied with a club's achievements, but when one surveys the combined efforts throughout the district, one is overwhelmed with the total good. The present day is a challenge. Now a man can help shape his destiny in the direction of tomorrow more than in any other age." Dr. Swope emphasized the work of Rotary Foundation and the Paul Harris fund, exhorting the club members to share in this great work.

Following the regular meeting the speaker met with the district assembly. Each of the committee chairmen reported on work done throughout the past year, and projected his plans for the coming months. These the district governor criticized constructively, and gave suggestions for strengthening the total program. He commended the club for its fellowship, group singing, and effort put forth by each member in advancing the ideals of Rotary.

Theodore Staudenmeyer, Jr., lead the group singing. Elwood L. Burton, of Morrisville club, was a guest.
